But she has no part to play in your decision, Diamond. Women know. There was an old man by our door. A tale of the Vedurman or Division, known in Hur-at-Hur, says: over me, laughing, chattering, babbling. . . I was delivered by a sleep like death; in it, even time. When he was done Veil was silent a long time and then said, "That was what you meant, when you shoulders hunched, joined the stream of pedestrians. The corridor widened, became a hall. Fiery." "What else?" I asked, and since I was still holding the cup, I took another swallow of that dirt, rock, water. The air was cool and still. Away from the dripping of the stream it was silent. Oblivious to all this, Gelluk talked on, following the endless spell of his own enchanting voice. . . had said it last night to a heifer or a woman. At last he said he must go on, and the children drifted away as he folded up his pack..strange-looking, having pale reddish skin, long pale hair, and narrow eyes the colour of ice. His.Dulse wandered about a bit before he found what he took to be the Dark Pond. It was small, half mud and reeds, with one vague, boggy path to the water, and no track on that but goat-hoofs. The water was dark, though it lay out under the bright sky and far above the peat soils. Dulse followed the goat-tracks, growling when his foot slipped in the mud and he wrenched his ankle to keep from falling. At the brink of the water he stood still. He stooped to rub his ankle. He listened..It was hard to be aware of her through the wizard's talk and the constant, half-conscious controlling spells that wove a darkness round him. But when Otter could do so, then it was not so much as if she was with him, as that she was him, or that he was her. He saw through her eyes. Her voice spoke in his mind, stronger and clearer than Gelluk's voice and spells. Through her eyes and mind he could see, and think. And he began to see that the wizard, completely certain of possessing him body and soul, was careless of the spells that bound Otter to his will. A bond is a connection. Nobody had horses but Alder, and they were for his cowboys. She gave her guest a basin of hot water and a clean towel for his poor feet, and then thought to ask him if he might want a bath, which he did. They heated the water and filled the old tub, and she went into her room while he had his bath on the hearth. When she came out it was all cleared away and wiped up, the towels hung before the fire. She'd never known a man to look after things like that, and who would have expected it of a rich man? Wouldn't he have servants, where he came from? But he was no more trouble than the cat. "I'll bring food," he said, and strode on, quickening his pace so that he vanished soon, though not so abruptly as the Namer, in the light and shadow under the trees. Irian watched till he was certainly gone and then made her way through high grass and weeds to the little house.. Now, as otter, he was thinking only that he would like to stay otter, be otter, in the sweet brown. It was as strangely quiet as the farmlands. Not a voice, not a face. It was difficult to feel uneasy in an ordinary-looking town on a sweet spring morning, but in such silence he must wonder if he was indeed in a plague-stricken place or an island under a curse. He went on. Between a house and an old plum tree was a wash line, the clothes pinned on it flapping in the sunny breeze. A cat came round the corner of a garden, no abandoned starveling but a white-pawed, well-whiskered, prosperous cat. And at last, coming down the steep little street, which here was cobbled, he heard voices.. flex his aching wrists and work his lips that had been smashed against his teeth for hours. "The
